Prolonged television watchers have a higher risk of fatal pulmonary embolism

This study showed television time was positively associated with the risk of mortality from pulmonary embolism in a large cohort study of Japanese men and women.

Reference: Shirakawa et al., Circulation 2016; 134:355-357
Contact at University of Tsukuba: Prof. K Yamagishi